COLONEL A. BURR.

MOTION FOR COMMITMENT.

EXAMINATION OF EVIDENCE.

Mr. McRae. Did you say that general Wilkinson's having dined with Mr. Chouteau filled you with indignation? A. I have said that I thought it an indignity offered me, and it was so thought of by the officers. But let me here say, that gen. Wilkinson having depied our interviews in the woods and rooms are incorrect. And I can completely prove it on my return to St. Louis. Q. Did you not recommend Cold Water as a suitable spot for a cantonment? A. While general Wilkinson was at Washington, I received several letters from him, in one of which he stated that a cantonment was wanted for 500 men. He directed me to select a spot near Cahokia. He described the kind of position he wished. I reported several situations answering his instructions, but I do not recollect that I mentioned Cold Water among them, although I had viewed it and thought it offered a good military position (but not in the bottom) which the general fixed on—nor did I conceive it was contemplated to have a cantonment in the midst of the settlements. Mr. McRae. Were you not in treaty for it yourself? A. I was. I wanted it for a farm and mill seat, and not for a military post. Q. Do you know whether that place is occupied as a military post, or used merely for the convenience of the soldiers while stationed there? A. I think it a very unimilitary position. The troops were posted in a thick wood, which they had to cut down, dig up the roots, and grub up the bushes for a parade. It may hereafter make a good meadow or field, when they are ordered on. Q. Is there a factory there? A. Yes. Q. Good Water? A. There is a good spring and a handsome marsh next to the second bank. There is also a commanding situation for a cantonment within the purchase, but not at that spot. Q. Are you certain that there was a good understanding between general Wilkinson, colonel Burr and judge Easton? A. I believe there was. Easton often visited him, and endeavored to reconcile us after we fell out, and the general has sometimes read to me paragraphs from letters he received from colonel Burr, about the probability of a war with Spain, and a change of politics in the U. S. He has also read others from Dayton and John Smith of Ohio, &c. Q. Have you any reason to believe there was an intimacy between general Wilkinson and judge Easton? I have said I believed there was—Easton has told me so. Q. Have you any other reason? A. Easton was almost every day with the general. Q. At what period? A. On general Wilkinson's arrival, previous to the fourth of July, and for some time after, Easton was frequently in the general's office, and spoke of him in the highest terms. Q. Was there any intimacy previous to the general's arrival? A. I never saw them together previous to the general's arrival. Q. Did major Kibby reside on the frontiers previous to the arrival of general Wilkinson? A. I believe he did. I have seen him and understood he lived near St. Charles—I esteemed him as a man of honor; whose word and oath would be taken where perhaps general Wilkinson would be shaken. Q. When major Kibby made the deposition which has been mentioned, was it not reported and believed that lieutenant Pike and his party had been destroyed? A. I cannot tell when he made the deposition. Q. When you heard of the deposition was it not reported that Pike & his party were killed? A. On recollection, I think I have seen an account in some newspapers of their having been destroyed, but the only report which I deemed correct was, that they were taken by the Spaniards and conducted to Santa Feo. Q. Did not major Kibby quit our government and become a subject of the king of Spain? A. That is my presumption. I found him in that territory when I arrived there—but as I did not review the possession, it is mere conjecture. Q. When judge Easton mentioned to you that colonel Burr had made him certain proposals did he speak of any particular newspaper. A. Not that I recollect.

CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, November 7.

DEBATE

On the reference of a Memorial from sundry merchants and traders of Philadelphia, praying for a repeal of the non importation law.

Mr. W. Alston said he thought it at this time extremely improper to refer the petition, as was proposed. If any step were to be taken in regard to the prayer of the petition it should be done in committee of the whole house. If the expediency of repealing the law alluded to in the petition was to be considered, it was a plain question which would present itself to every member of the house, and could be decided without any previous reference to any inferior committee. The petition said something about instructions given to our ministers. If it were referred to the committee of commerce and manufactures, they might think themselves authorized to call upon the secretary of state for information. It had therefore at once better be brought before the house and not go to a committee, for though he felt perfect confidence in that committee, he was not willing at this crisis to entrust them with the power of calling for information which it might not be proper to communicate. In the committee of the whole a resolution might be brought forward which would determine the principle at once; he therefore moved that it be referred to the committee of the whole house.

The Speaker said the motion made by Mr. Alston would supersede the motion for reference to the committee of commerce and manufactures.

Mr. Bassett amended the motion so as to refer it to a committee of the whole on the state of the union.

Mr. Smilie was sorry this motion was made, for it was certainly giving the memorial more importance than was attached to it by the motion of his colleague, who had introduced it. He considered the matter in a serious point of view. That there was in this country a party in favor of the British government he had no doubt, nor did he doubt but that this memorial was intended to embarrass the operations of our government, and strengthen the British government in their measures. This was his opinion; and if other gentlemen also thought so, they would manifest it by their votes.

Mr. Bassett said it would be recollected by the house, that, urged by the same feelings which had actuated the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Rowan) he had arisen to offer his sentiments on the subject; but had been prevented by the preference given to another gentleman. He considered the subject in a different light from the gentleman last up, and did not view it merely as it affected the petitioners. Their proceedings on this memorial would go forward to the public, and shew to the world their opinions on the subject. Should they not now rouse from the slumber into which the gentleman from Pennsylvania had said they had fallen? Should they not shew that they would be roused when the occasion called for it? He wished it referred to a committee of the whole on the state of the union, because the nation was particularly interested in it; not to give peculiar consequence to the petition, but because he wished the full sense of the house to be obtained on it. He had prepared a resolution before the gentleman from North Carolina made his motion, declaring that the law ought not to be repealed. He thought this would have been the proper course; but as the affair now stood it was his wish to go into a committee of the whole instantly; not out of respect to the petitioners, but to the community, who had been long waiting for an expression of their sentiments. What have we said, asked Mr. B.?—That we will support the government & its measures? No; we have said nothing. He was for giving to the world their opinion, that as far as those measures were correct and proper, they would support them in their full extent. This was his reason for wishing it referred to the committee of the whole on the state of the union.

Mr. Chandler said he could not say whether the subscribers to the petition were American citizens or British subjects residing in our cities. If he were to judge from the language and terms which it conveyed, he should strongly suspect that they were of the latter class of people. If he were certain of that, he should wish the petition not to be noticed at all; but as he was not perfectly convinced of it, he wished it to lie on the table. If it were necessary to take up the subject they could at any time go into a committee of the whole on the state of the union, without the assistance of the petition.

MINUTES.

TUESDAY, December 8.

The Speaker laid before the house a communication from the secretary of war in pursuance of the resolution moved by Mr. Quincy on the 1st inst.

Mr. MacCreery presented a memorial from the officers of the army of the U. S. praying for an increase of pay and rations; which was referred to the committee on military and naval establishments.

Mr. D. R. Williams obtained leave of absence from to-morrow for the remainder of the session.

Mr. Milnor said, it would be recollected by the house, that the committee on military & naval establishments had made a report which had been made the order of the day for yesterday; as it had not been taken up, and as he thought it proper that it should be before the same committee of the whole who had other modes of defence under consideration, he moved that the committee of the whole, to whom it had been referred, be discharged from its further consideration, and that it be referred to the same committee to whom was referred the bill from the senate, and the bill reported by the committee of aggressions of the subject of defence.

Mr. Brown thought the bills for the erection of gun-boats and fortifications should be distinct from any other mode of defence; as considerable progress might be made in building them before the other modes could be completely discussed. The whole system of defence could not be entirely gone through in both houses in less than two or three weeks; which in that case would produce as long a delay in attending to what it was necessary immediately to commence. If the gentleman's object was not to clog the projected measures for defence, he must perceive that there were strong reasons against the adoption of his motion. negative Ayes 25.

Mr. Newton said the house would recollect that on Monday next the law prohibiting the importation of certain articles would go into operation; and it was also known that that law was extremely defective. In order to prevent a variety of suits and perplexities which would arise under it, and in consequence of a letter from the Treasury Department to the committee of commerce and manufactures and submitted to them, exposing some of its defects, he moved a resolution directing the committee of commerce and manufactures to enquire into what amendments were necessary to be made, with power to report by bill. It was not the wish of the committee to suspend or repeal the law; it was their wish and the wish of the treasury department, that it should not be clogged so as to produce law suits. It was a sound principle of all governments to prevent litigation; and if it was made to appear that any law which they had passed gave rise to it, it ought to be amended. The letter stated a variety of cases which arose under that law. To remedy these defects was the object of the present motion.

The motion was agreed to and before the house adjourned a bill was introduced for that purpose.

Mr. Dana moved for the consideration of the resolution which he laid on the table yesterday, which being taken up

Mr. D. said, the resolution contemplated a prospective measure, which might be beneficial to the country; and it might require much consideration. He wished it to be referred to a committee of the whole house a week or a fortnight hence when it might be freely discussed.

Mr. Crowninshield wished the gentleman from Connecticut would have been so good as to have stated the object he had in view in moving this resolution. It appeared to Mr. C. that it would be very improper at the present time to enter into a regulation of this kind. Should they at this time authorize merchant vessels to arm, or now to refuse the right of searching merchant vessels? However that right had been violated, he did not feel prepared at this time totally to deny it. He had no objection to the resolution lying on the table; but till a war actually commenced he thought nothing should be done on this subject; he did not feel prepared at this moment to pass this resolution. It was not, he observed a proposition to authorize a committee to investigate the subject, but a direct proposition to the house to adopt an important measure. Notwithstanding the abuses of the right of search, which had taken place, he did not think it proper for them at this juncture to refuse the right of searching merchant vessels for contraband articles; for such he presumed was the object of the gentleman from Connecticut; the resolution appeared to him to hear that Mr. Dana was intended by the gentleman, this time, in proper objects to time they nothing of vessels being object was, of the arm of bill in order of defence object was, to might occur as a rule, by vessels; the latter can but by suits system of regulated it and one to. He wished a law, in under consideration object. He in the first should be gails were resolution; for it to be acc met.

Mr. Dana said, that if the resolution was intended to have the effect supposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts at this time, he should also have deemed it improper. The resolution embraced two objects to be provided for when at any time they should be expedient, but said nothing of the propriety of our merchant vessels being armed at this time. One object was, that when the executive authority of the country gave consent to the arming of merchant vessels, they might sail in union so as to render their purpose of defence more effectual. The other object was, to remedy any difficulty which might occur, if merchants should disagree as to the rates of contribution to be paid by vessels; and it might be a question in the latter case whether relief could be had but by suits against the owners. In their system of general laws, they had one which regulated the distribution of prize money and one to regulate salvage on captures.
He wished something of this kind, a general law, in regard to the present subject under consideration. This was his real object. He had presented it to the house in the first instance, that the house, if they should be generally satisfied that the details were impracticable, might reject the resolution; if they did not, they would refer it to a committee to make the experiment.
Mr. Chandler could easily conceive that the time might come, perhaps was not far distant, when the measures contemplated by this proposition might be necessary; but he could not precisely understand why it had not in the first instance been referred to a select committee, rather than a committee of the whole as was proposed.
Mr. Dana wished the subject to be discussed in committee of the whole, that all difficulties might be at once presented and judged of. If they chose to send it to a select committee, it was proper to give it a discussion.
Mr. Smith the course proposed by the mover of the resolution was the most correct. In committee of the whole house they might decide whether a law of this kind was necessary. Indeed he could see no objection to the adoption of the resolution, it merely went to discuss a subject which might be properly comprized in a standing law of the country.
The resolution was then referred to a committee of the whole on Monday.
(Tuesday's proceedings to be continued.)
Wednesday, December 9.
Mr. Green presented the petition of sundry merchants of Nantucket, praying that that place may be erected into a port of entry for vessels from the Cape of Good Hope and places beyond the same; which was referred to the committee of commerce and manufactures.
Mr. Boyle, from the committee on public lands, in pursuance of a resolution referred to that committee, reported a bill making further disposition of those sections of public land heretofore reserved for the disposal of Congress; which was read twice and referred to a committee of the whole house on Monday next.
Mr. Dawson presented to the house an estimate from the secretary at war, of the expense of a standing army of 32,500 men—which was referred to the committee of the whole to whom were referred the resolutions for the increase of our military and naval establishments.
On motion of Mr. Blount, the house agreed to consider the report of the committee of the whole of yesterday, on the bill from the Senate for the construction of gun boats; which being under consideration, Mr. Durrell moved to strike out 188 and insert 124 as the number of gun-boats, and to add the words "four 44 gun frigates." On this motion a debate ensued, in which Messrs. Durrell, Gardner, Cook, and Masters supported the motion, and Messrs. Blount, Smith, Thomas, Bacon, Crowninshield, Sawyer, Holland, Chandler, Fisk, and Gardener opposed it.
In the course of the debate Mr. Blount called for a division of the question.
The question on striking out was negative

After which the bill was ordered to a third reading to-morrow.
NORFOLK, December 7.
When we stated in our last the circumstances respecting the French seaman, we did not know that two other seamen belonging to the United States, service had been within a few days past taken down on board the Patriot, but which we were assured from good authority is a fact, whether by force or by their own consent we are not informed.
As much as we advocate the policy and value of restoring deserters, we think this is a respectful mode of proceeding in order to obtain the end. It is not to be expected that in an American port, a seaman is to be permitted to be taken, or to depart, from the service without the consent of the government or his commanding officer. Such a practice is repugnant to every sense of propriety, and but that we are not disposed to use harsh expressions, we should employ much stronger terms.

Extract of a letter from a friend at Washington, to the editor of the Freeman's Journal, dated Washington, December 8, 1807.
"The house of representatives were yesterday several hours in conclave, on a message from the president, understood, out of doors, to relate to our affairs with Great Britain. Nothing is suffered to transpire, but it is believed, that there is no ground for new alarm. I know at least one member, who had formed an opinion, before the dispatches had come to hand, that as matters now stood, if we should have war, it would be our own fault; and I am happy to assure you that his opinion, instead of being weakened by the dispatches, has been completely confirmed." [From the respectable standing of the writer of the above, the public may rely with confidence, on the information contained in it.]
NON-IMPORTATION—The following is the bill laid before the house on Tuesday last, by Mr. Newton, and which will undoubtedly pass:
A bill supplementary to an act, entitled, "an act to prohibit the importation of certain goods, wares and merchandise.
Section 1. Be it enacted by the senate & house of representatives of the U. S. of America in congress assembled, That nothing in the act to which this is a supplement, shall be so construed as to prohibit the importation of the following articles, that is to say:
First. Wrappers and outside packages in which goods, the importation of which is not prohibited, usually are and shall be wrapped or packed at the time of their importation; Second. Bags or sacks in which salt shall be imported; Third. Glass bottles or phials in which drugs, medicines or any other article, the importation of which is not prohibited, shall be imported;
Fourth. Printed books, maps and charts.
Fifth. Watches, mathematical, astronomical and surgical instruments.
Sixth. Shalloons and woollen stuffs.
Sect. 2. And be it further enacted. That the articles of the following description shall be held and considered as being embraced by the description of articles, the importation of which is prohibited by the act to which this act is a supplement, that is to say:
All articles manufactured entirely of silk and wool, or of silk and flax, or of flax and wool:

Floor cloths.
Woollen cassimeres, carpets, carpeting, and mats, whose invoice prices shall exceed five shillings sterling per square yard.
Sect. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever a doubt shall arise whether any article imported into the United States is embraced by the description of articles, the
act to which this is a supplement, the comptroller's decision thereon, approved by the secretary of the treasury, shall be final and conclusive, and be taken and held in every respect as the true construction of the act.
Sect. 4. And be it further enacted, That no articles which shall be imported from any place beyond the Cape of Good Hope, on board any vessel cleared out before the day of — from any port within the U.
S. or the territories thereof for the said Cape of Good Hope, or any place beyond the same, shall be subject to the prohibition enacted by the act to which this act is a supplement.
Mr. Daviess, in his 'View of the president's conduct concerning the conspiracy of the year 1806, p. 24,' letter to Mr.
Madison, tells the secretary, that the information he had received, had convinced him that the Mexican provinces and the American possessions on the Mississippi, with the Floridas, were in the view of the conspirators to form one kingdom—but that neither Burr nor Wilkinson was to be the monarch. "What I heard this (says Mr. D.) MOREAU instantly occurred to my mind: and I have heard this day that he is to be here this fall, and go down by way of Orleans, and round to Philadelphia." This letter bears date "Near Breckenridge court house (Kentucky) 14th August, 1806," and is at least a hint to induce a watchful government to keep an eye upon the movements of this military man.
The London Courier of the 19th Oct. makes the following remarks on the king's proclamation:
"The misunderstanding with America, which proved a source of so much anxious speculation, may now be considered finally settled.—In a former paper we stated that the wounded honor of the United States was only to be healed by marking the conduct of the Leopard, in its attack on the Chesapeake, with the displeasure of the British government. This once granted, along with the renunciation of all claim of right to visit ships of war, we hazarded an opinion that the friendly relation between the two countries would not receive any farther interruption, and to this opinion we adhere. The first of these points was publicly conceded some days since. The recall of admiral Berkeley, within whose command, and by whose direct and immediate authority, the affair of the Chesapeake took place, cannot be considered in any other point of light than as a sacrifice to the wounded honor of the Americans in that particular case. The second great point of dispute, which is the general question, appears, by a proclamation in "The Gazette," of Saturday night, to be also completely set at rest forever.
(Here an abstract of the Proclamation is introduced.)
"Here the right of visiting ships of war in the precise manner it was exercised by the Leopard, in pursuance of the orders of admiral Berkeley, is completely given up, and another course prescribed in its place. This amounts to a complete abandonment of all claim to search neutral ships of war—nor does it stop here; for the recommendation of great care and caution to be observed in the search of merchant vessels, is an indirect admission that the complaints so repeatedly urged by the Americans, of irregularities committed by our cruisers in the search of their merchantmen, are well founded, and consequently the caution recommended against their recurrence is a farther concession to America. Under all these circumstances, although the recal of our seamen to their country's service, upon the ground of especial difficulty and danger, be the prominent and most ostensible feature of the proclamation, it is an official declaration of the code of maritime rights which we mean to observe in our intercourse with America, in relation to the several disputed points, as well as complaints, that have been brought into discussion.
"These points embrace the conduct of the Leopard, the alleged irregularities committed in the search of neutral merchant vessels, and the arrogated claim of a right to visit ships of war. And, as in these three points, the proclamation of our government has given full satisfaction, by the recal of admiral Berkeley, the injunction of regularity in the search of merchant vessels, and the abandonment of the right to search ships of war, we do repeat, that we must consider the proclamation as a declaration of an amicable adjustment of all our differences with America." Captain M'Lachlan, of the brig William and Mary, who arrived at Charleston on the 4th inst. from Amsterdam, was boarded on the 30th Oct. in lat. 34, 15, long.

19, by the British logger Alarm, captain Wilkins, who informed, that a few days before he had fallen in with the Portuguese fleet, from Lisbon for the Brazils, having on board the Queen, Prince Regent, and most of the nobility attached to the court of Portugal. Lisbon had been taken possession of by the French troops when they sailed. The fleet consisted of 33 sail, 17 of which were ships of the line, conveyed by the British.
The Charleston Courier, of December 2, says, "Capt. Couin, of brig Eliza, which arrived from Congo on Monday last, reports, that 15 days ago, he was boarded by the Lilly, British ship of war, 20 days from England for Antigua, and treated with marked politeness. They informed Captain C. that there had been a very great probability of a war between Great-Britain and the U. States, but that it had been amicably arranged, otherwise he would have been a good prize. The seamen's protections were not asked for, nor the smallest trouble given. The Lilly heretofore has rendered herself conspicuous in her conduct towards the Americans."

were read and ordered to be printed.
A memorial was presented and read from the Judges of the court of appeals, stating certain inconveniences resulting from the which was referred to the committee for Courts of Justice.

A petition was presented and read from praying that the said Woodson's seat may
